Volume XXII

Greenwood Community
Junior-Senior High School

South Madison Avenue
Greenwood, Indiana 46142

Through these doors there's a world of people . . .
 singing, dancing . . . cheering till that final moment . . . then buzzing Jerry's, the Tee Pee . . .
 sharing jokes, good company.
 They're putting newly learned skills to use . . .
 writing themes . . . baking cakes . . . preparing for jobs, college, marriage.

Some are being active . . . playing games . . . straining muscles . . . refusing to accept defeat.
 Others are getting acquainted . . . making friends . . .
 holding hands . . . falling in love and out.
 Many are punching time cards . . . assisting customers . . .
 getting paid.

Most of them are acquiring responsibilities . . .
 forming beliefs about God, country, people . . .
 preparing for the day when their youth is gone.
 Time is short behind these doors . . . soon they must leave . . . they will regret leaving . . . for behind these doors is a special world

Homecoming affords class unity;

Classes begin early for senior Margie Stewart as she starts her daily schedule.

Vying for Homecoming queen were Margie Stewart, Janet Petty, Jane Mize, and Diana Roberts.

Happy surprise at a crowning moment marks the beginning of Margi's reign.

Margi reigns

With the student council as the organizer, homecoming vaulted into a spirited effort. Selected garages and barns were transformed into float construction sites and kick-off preparations made it possible for the younger students to participate in the excitement.

Homecoming 1968 started with a snake dance, a bonfire, a skit, and introduction of team members held the night before the game to stimulate school spirit.

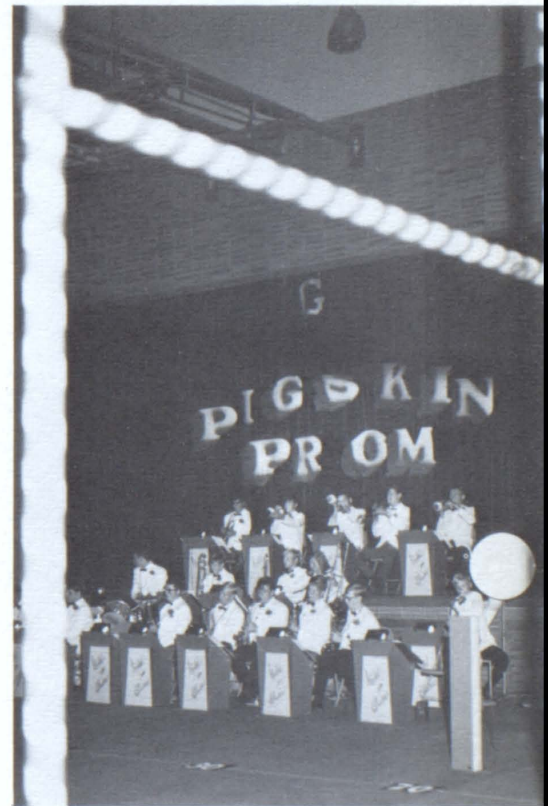

Thoughts of disbanding homecoming have vanished and the memories of the competitions, the corsages and the coronations live on.

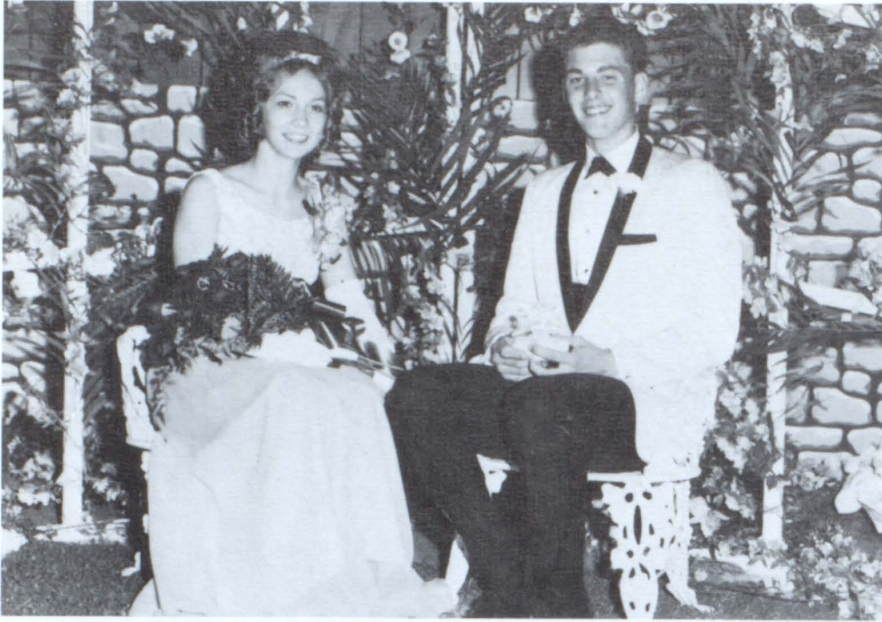

G.H.S. pepsters arouse timely interest at the bonfire ceremonies to kick off the annual homecoming.

Leave 'em Defenseless, freshman theme, took top honors for the second time in the class competition.

Gold'n Blues, our own dance band provided entertainment for the annual senior sponsored Pigskin Prom on the imitation football field to end the homecoming festivities.

Queen and King, Bev Bryant and Rex Boner reign over the 1968 Prom.

Pondering personal moments at the dance are Lynda Woods and her date.

Susan Hiatt and Larry Cooper were the princess and prince of the prom.

Social events relieve frustrations

Many couples attend the Harvest Moon Ball, sponsored by the Goldenaires.

Formally attired, prom couples relax at the Sherwood Country Club.

Classes elect royalty to reign at all-school dances

The 1968 Junior-Senior Prom with the theme "Moonlight and Roses," was held at the Sherwood Country Club. Decorations were highlighted by a swing ornamented with fragrant roses.

In late November excitement and class competition was aroused by the Harvest Moon Ball and its accompanying king and queen rivalry. With music by the Gold 'n Blues dancers crowded the floor.

December 23, 1968 the junior class sponsored the Christmas Dance. Conforming to the theme of "Winter Wonderland," the class placed Christmas trees about the room.

Bill Overman's band plays for the junior sponsored "Winter Wonderland."

I.U.'s 'Singing Hoosiers' delight local communities

WIFE's Good Guys oppose the Greenwood faculty in a benefit game.

Exciting entertainment came by Greenwood this year with the innovation of outsiders providing cultural and humorous programs. The "Singing Hoosiers" of Indiana University were sponsored by the high school vocal department. Late in January the men faculty members played the WIFE Good Guys in a hilarious basketball game. This activity was under the sponsorship of the band to raise money for new uniforms. In addition, our own students sent chills down the spines of audiences with talented performances.

In the school choral department convocation, Mike Lakes sings "Which Way America," with the concert choir.

Performing for the local area, the "Singing Hoosiers" thrilled an enthusiastic audience in the Whiteland auditorium.

Goldenaires: Karen Roth, Chyrie Jett, Kathy Buster, Carole Ferrand, Nancy Meier, Annie Koch, Pam Hoskins. Not pictured--Loretta Owens, capt.

Mr. Lamble plays "A-tude for Piano" to the enjoyment of the students.

Assemblies, our World stoppers

Students await the variety of convocations given each year by clubs. Among this year's programs were Ronnie Munn's trampoline act, the choir's "Up With People", and the annual holiday assemblies.

"Annie Get Your Gun" was this year's Senior Class play. This was a tradition which was dropped but enthusiastically revived by the Class of 1969. Under the direction of Miss Lint and the leading players, Annie Koch and Jim McGuire, the comedy was a unified class effort.

Demonstrating the art of spaceball, Ronnie Munn thrilled the audience with precision on the trampoline.

Christmas speaker is Rev. Moore.

"A Poem" is recited by Mickey James at the Hi-Y Christmas assembly.

Susan Hiatt applies eye make up and Mike Rathbun puts on lipstick.

Wilson House provides the setting for this scene in the opening act.

Commencement culminates Greenwood High life

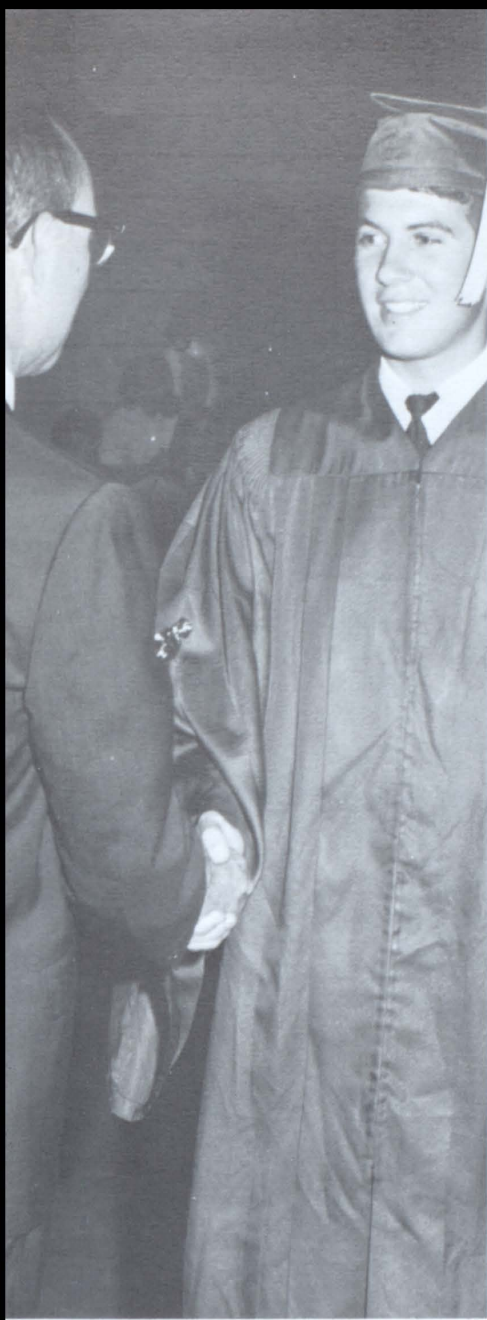

"Come on gang, I think I found it," says Brent Smith jokingly as he and Joann Downs lead the graduates in the processional.

Receiving the trophies of their academic achievement are salutatorians Adele Montgomery and Warren Miller.

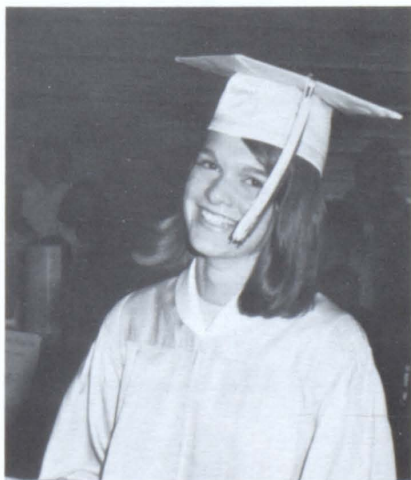

Having successfully completed four years at Greenwood Community High School, the one hundred and thirty-four members of the class of 1968 attained their goal as high school graduates, on June 4, 1968. The climax came as they received the diploma signifying the consummation of their academic toils on the secondary level. Valedictorian, John Gunn, spoke to the audience about the future.

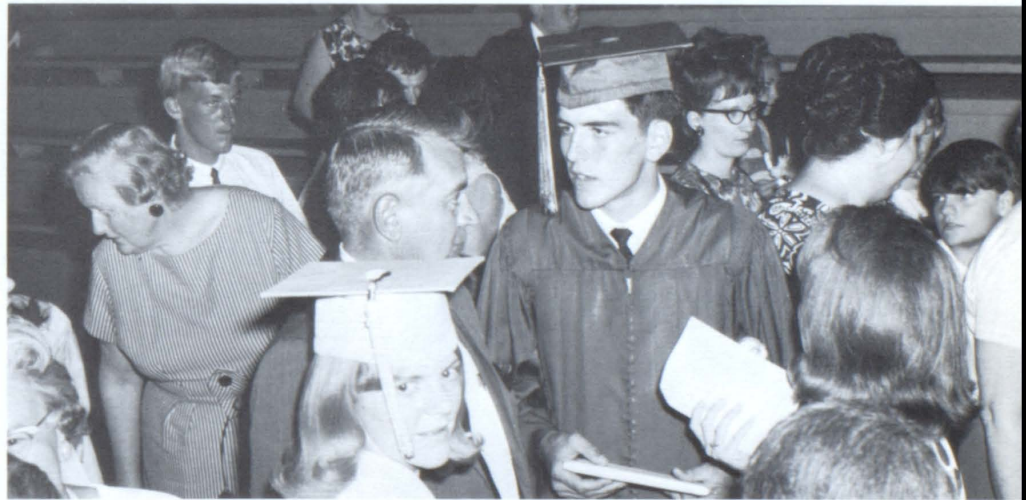

Downcast at the prospect of finally leaving the tradition-filled halls, the graduates may be confident that they were well prepared to enter whatever branch of life they choose to follow whether it be college, service, or occupation.

Congratulations are extended to John Gunn for his skills in both scholastic and athletic competition.

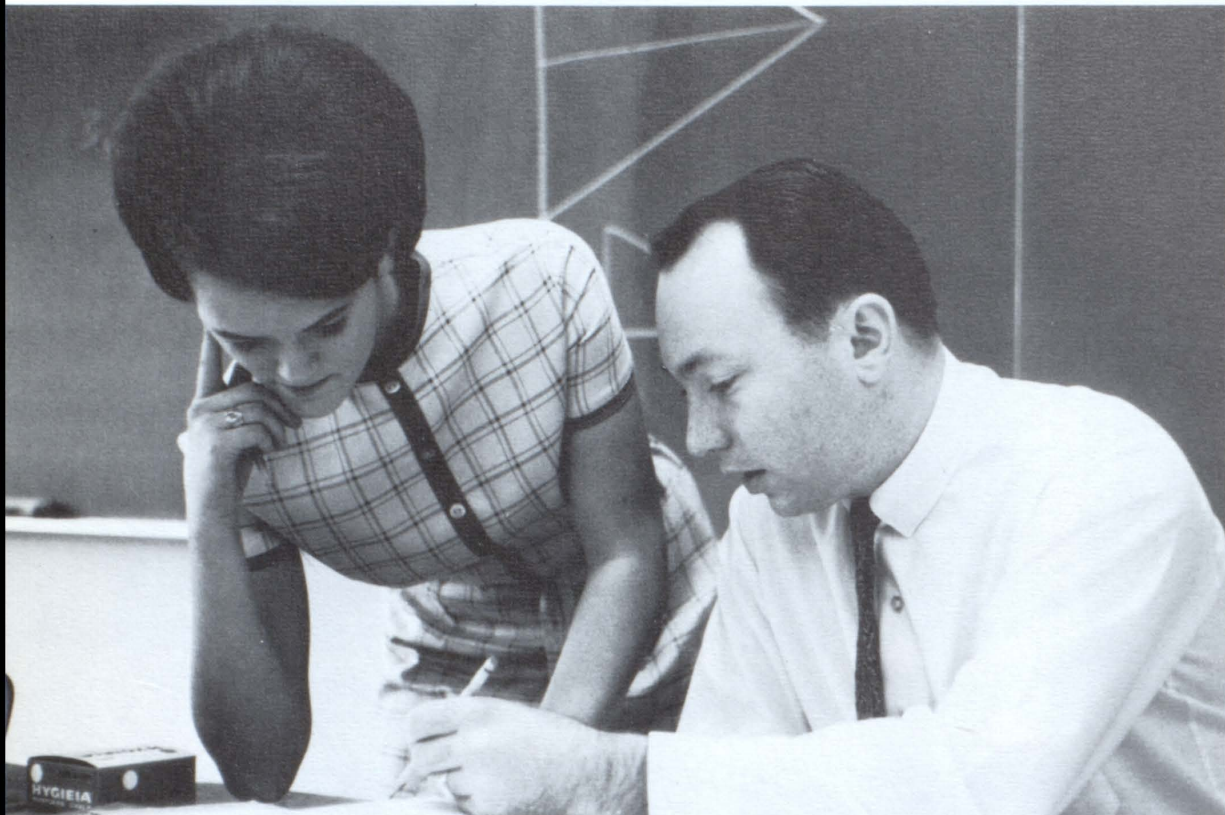

Steve Summers, president of the class of 1968, displayed the class composite of 134 members during graduation ceremonies.

The audience disperses slowly . . . parents congratulate freely . . . and everyone departs cheerfully after the annual commencement exercises.

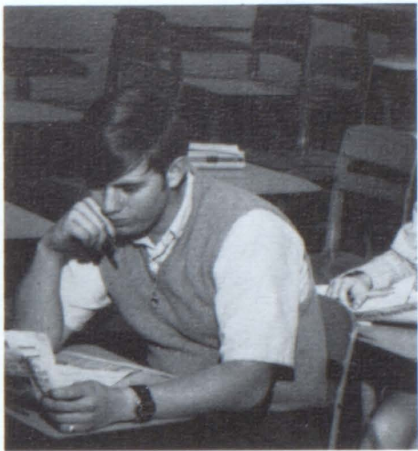

With a smile of jubilation, Gail Trent, graduating senior, steps forward to receive her diploma.

Mr. Brenton checks the calendar.

Students adopted readily to changes with new principal, Mr. Marshall.

Administrators spend time with new school plan

Greenwood School Corporation Superintendent, Dr. Earl Blemker, directs the administrative procedures for the high school and junior high staffs.

Assisting with the administrative work are Mr. Porter and Mr. Donson.

Counselors guide pupil scheduling during year

Counseling, Mrs. McFerran aids Linda Downs in fixing a schedule to fill needs.

As the new principal, Mr. Ralph Marshall had the hard task of acquainting himself with the teachers, the school, and the community. He works with Dr. Earl Blemker, general superintendent, in planning the new school and all administrative policy. Under Dr. Blemker are Mr. Donson and Mr. Porter, assistant superintendents. They are also on the scene when there is some decision making to do.

Mr. Brenton, the junior high principal, is entirely responsible for the seventh and eighth grades. Together he and Mr. Marshall spend a great deal of their time directing traffic in the lunch room. Additional tasks include keeping the halls clear of loiterers and continuing school policy for North Central Accreditation.

Junior high guidance counselor, Mrs. Ring, makes note of student absence, tardy and citizenship records.

Mrs. Talbott checks college boards and scholarship availability with Mr. Mellencamp, Guidance Director.

Serving the school, several duties fill the hours of personnel outside the classroom. The athletic director is responsible for scheduling athletic events and the official contracting. Secretarial work involves attendance records, school calendar and correspondence. The bookkeeper doles out school funds for organizations. The library is staffed with women willing to organize the material. Trained to aid the sick, the nurse occupies the health center, and the cooks prepare approximately 850 meals daily.

Athletic Director, Mr. Scotten, assumes control of the sports program.

School staff supplies many hours of useful service

Mrs. Loos, cashier, assists bookkeeper Mrs. Ramsey, in the bookstore selling classroom needs to pupils before school and between classes.

Relieving the office congestion caused by constant student inquiry are the office secretaries, Mrs. Stretchbery and Mrs. Dillon.

Community women play vital role

Librarian, Miss King, files new entries into the card catalogue.

Having her medical record checked by Mrs. Threlkeld is Kathy Johnson.

Mrs. Smith, library clerk, stamps publications for reference.

COOKS: Mrs. McClain, Mrs. Falconbury, Mrs. Boner, Mrs. Ferrill, Mrs. Haugh, Mrs. Duvall, Mrs. Humphrey, Mrs. Freshour, Mrs. Day, Mrs. Dougherty.

It's all business when feeding 850 hungry students daily.

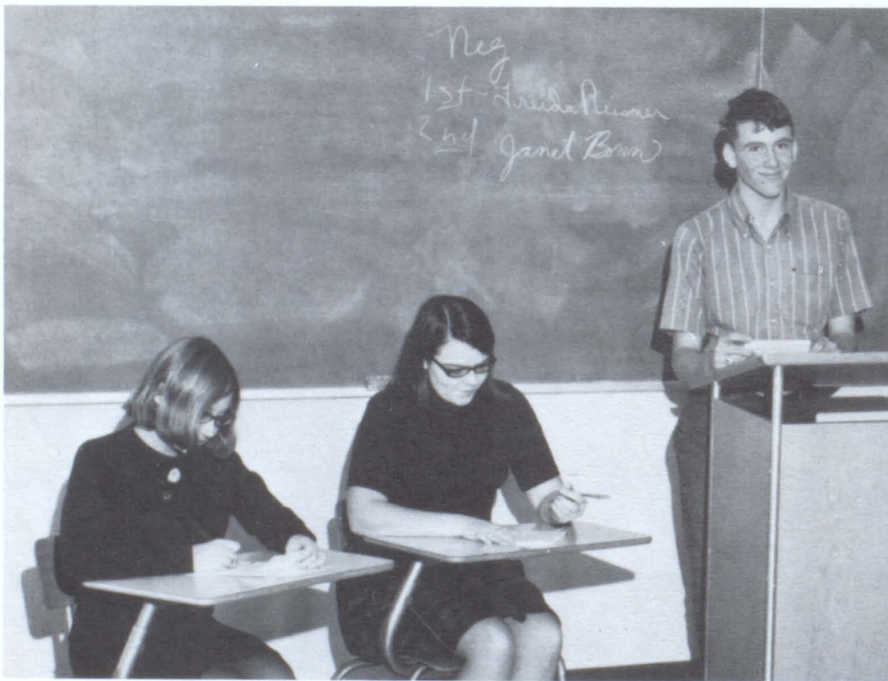

In an age of communication such as ours, mastering the English language is essential. The English Department of Greenwood this year has offered courses in grammar and composition, developmental reading, literature, speech, drama, and journalism.

English classes provide the students with knowledge of the basic structure of writing. Formal writings such as term papers and book reports are among the many projects done in class.

Jeff Davis as Romeo, and Linda Downs as Lady Capulet, prepare for "Romeo and Juliet."

Essential projects stress communication mastery

To aid in appreciation of poetry, Tim Byrnes shows the mobile he made for "Travel."

Developmental reading broadens English classes' coverage

The developmental reading program is new to the language arts program. It affords the students use in speed reading with a greater amount of comprehension.

It is of vital importance that we know and understand our language. In a world of modernization such as ours is today, the slightest misinterpretation of a single sentence or even a single word could cause destruction.

Mrs. Thomas lectures her freshmen English class on the proper use of grammar.

Developmental reading students use the shadow scopes in the isolated corral.

riots in social studies class

Greenwood High School offers a range of social studies classes from which to choose. Besides taking the required courses of government, sociology and U.S. history, all sophomore students are required to pass a one-semester citizenship course. Also included are psychology, geography, world history and international relations.

Seventh grade students learn factual evidence about the earth's geographical features in one of their junior high required subjects.

Federalist president of the Senate, Duke Woollen, chairs Congress.

Mr. Keene, lecturing his social studies class, relaxes on his desk.

Social Studies: Mr. Grayam, Mrs. Hoover, Mr. Keene, Mrs. Poynter, Mr. Sloop, Mr. Smith, Mrs. Thayer.

Foreign Language: Mr. Gilliem, Mrs. Peterson, Miss Starr.

Mr. Lamble explains the Roman profile to his first year Latin students.

Languages available to Greenwood students are Spanish, French and Latin. Latin, the most populated, provides a background for the derivation of English. It is helpful if one plans to go into medicine or law. Spanish and French are conversational languages and in the classroom stress is placed on pronunciation, vocabulary and grammar.

Language background contributes to proficiency

French sentences help Pat Coryell and Ted Mau express foreign thoughts.

This picture of a Roman, held by Noel Taylor in Mrs. Peterson's class, was en-

Baffled, Marsha Fuller obtains assistance in Spanish from Mr. Gilliem.

Art class creativity lends to self-expression

Among the high school populace are many students with the ability to draw, paint or sculpt. Art class gives these students the opportunity to develop such skills. For those less talented the class provides a time for a change from the academic pace for developing artistic craft.

Junior high girls draw still lifes to fulfill art requirements.

Students in biology learn about the fetal pig before dissection.

Science and mathematics stress

Scientific methods of inquiry

Following in the wake of Euclid, Newton and Gauss, Greenwood mathematicians and scientists, learned the importance of rigid, logical reasoning. In realizing the importance of computers in today's world, they organized a computer class in which they studied the operation and programmed Indiana Central's "thinking" machines. After algebra I, geometry, biology and physical science those wanting to go to college had available to them more advanced courses. In these classes were opportunities to acquire more complex and specialized knowledge, applicable in a world fast becoming one of higher educational standards.

Experimenting physics, Dorothy Phillips, Mary Carol Brock, Bill Reading and Bill Allen await the outcome.

Mr. Mellencamp uses the overhead projector to explain the lowest point on a function to senior math class members.

Business is a 'future investment'

Typing postal card timed writings, Phil Loos works in concentration.

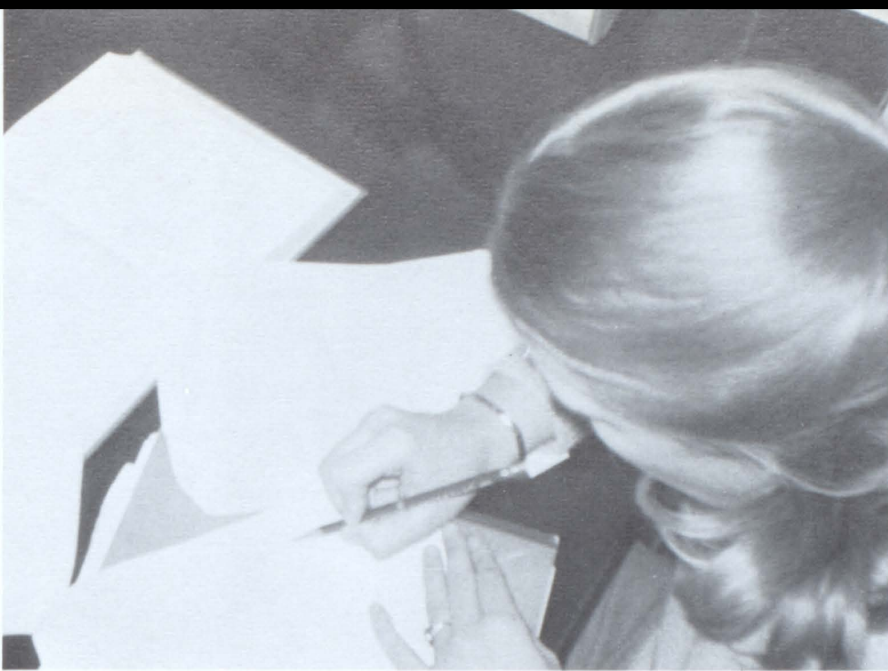

Susan Ike and Karren Brown prepare their stencils as Charlene Poynter and Debby Hinkle run theirs off on the mimeograph in office practice.

As a "future investment" the business section of the curriculum prepares students for careers, prepares the college-bound for assignments and enables future independents to manage their finances. Through the subjects of general business, bookkeeping, shorthand, typing, office practice, business law, business English and business math, girls and boys alike are trained to fill secretarial, bookkeeping and accounting positions. They are skilled enough to take quick notes in class and to type their assignment, both necessities in college. Also as teens graduate from high school, they begin to strike out on their own, to live independently and to think in terms of a family. With a knowledge of how our economic system operates and how to cope with it, they can more readily manage their money and make a success of their financial life.

In business law Mr. Whitson laughingly points out inadvertent errors in a contract, then emphasizes efficiency to Mike Rakic and John Hall.

To keep up with her bookkeeping, Susan Myers works in the credit column.

Timing the students on their shorthand assignment is Mrs. Keene.

Greenwood's skillful students find Shorthand and typing tests easier

Margie Myers points to the star that proclaims her in first place in Mrs. Stewart's Typing I class.

Vocal and instrumental music Offers extracurricular study

Steve Ike reflects intense interest during concert band rehearsal.

Choralaires sing on stage at Johnson County sponsored talent show.

Directing the band, Mr. Van Veld gestures for the bandsmen to hold the note.

Music continued to be a learning process as the department endeavored to teach tone, rhythm, breathing and sight reading. Unification within each area formed one of the largest criteria for the current year. Providing some new approaches to the varied kinds of music helped realize the goal--student accomplishment.

Mrs. Raymond adjusts the volume control during record listening in the junior high music class.

Physical Education provides a means of venting one's frustrations and anxieties, while Driver Education teaches modern techniques of defensive driving. Playing both outdoor and indoor sports the boys and girls physical education classes learn co-ordination in their own capacity. With the overcrowded condition of the junior and senior high school, many of the students have to wait until summer to fulfill the requirements. To the student, Drivers Education becomes a regular class in irregular surroundings. The student finds himself, to his delight, in a car and behind the wheel, developing the skill to drive on the complex highways.

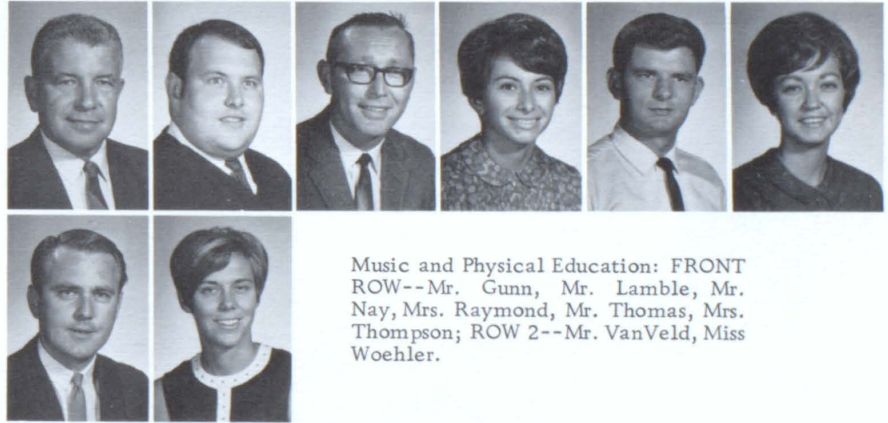

Driver education instructor, Mr. Nay, explains techniques to Pam Hoskins.

Woodmen strive for practical creativity in shop

Home economics and shop constitute the practical training classes of Greenwood High School. In home economics aspects of home and family life that are included in the curriculum are sewing, cooking, child care and family planning. Even as the classroom prepares girls for home life so it prepares boys for vocations or hobbies. The boys can work on their own cars in auto shop. Wood shop, too, can lend toward developing a handyman in the house. More complex areas are delved into in architectural shop and mechanical drawing.

Model homes built in the architectural class are displayed by Joe Calabra, Bob Stull, and Steve Adwell.

WOODMAN, TIMBERLINES

Organize under new sponsorship

WOODMAN Editor, Caroline Randall, and TIMBERLINES Editor, Bruce Miller, attended summer publications institutes at Indiana University and Vincennes University respectively. Returning with new ideas and inspired hopes for their editorial positions, they learned that a new advisor was at the helm. Mr. McCarty met with the staff members and outlined the goals for the year. Basically, the aims were to strive for the best possible publications, to meet the deadlines and to put out eighteen issues of the TIMBERLINES. Mainly the goals were accomplished, now onward.

spark and drive

Donning blue and gold capes, this year's booster club consisted of a girls and boys pep block and the pep band totaling a membership of 450. This year's club was under the leadership of president Carole Ferrand, vice-president Debbie Jones, secretary Cheri Day, and treasurer Susie Koch. Boys were led by president Greg Thompson and vice-president Phil Loos. Annually the booster club sponsors the homecoming bonfire and snakedance. Other projects under the direction of the club were sign-painting parties and the selling of blue and gold spirit ribbons.

Chilean, Peruvian students grasp Rapid pace, friendly atmosphere

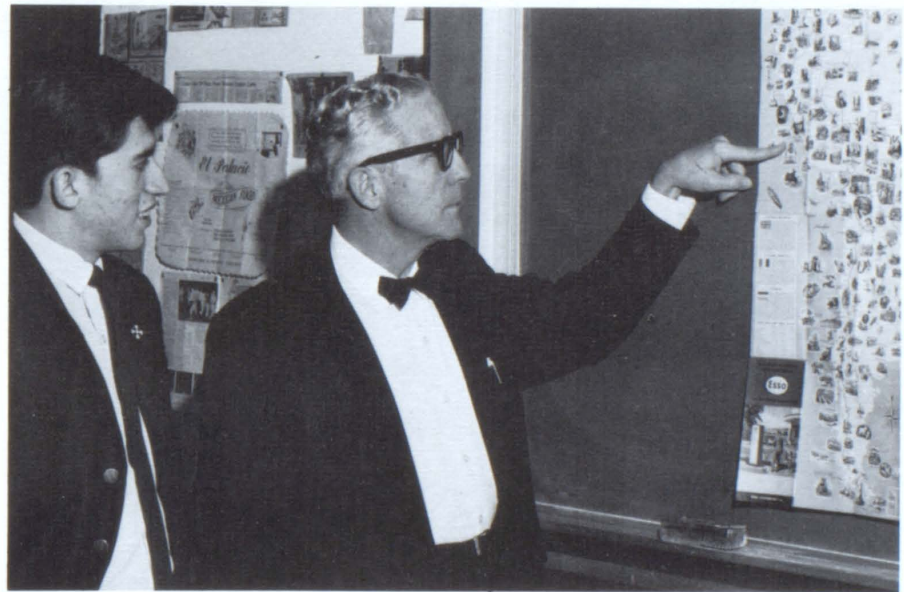

This year, for the first time, Greenwood High School promoted two exchange students. The program through which Victor Visval and Maximiliano Jarpa were able to attend school in the United States is the International Exchange. Victor came from Lima, Peru and has chosen mechanical drawing as a career. He is very interested in politics. Maximiliano came from Santiago, Chile. He is active in sports and enjoys car races. Max plans to study psychology. Both boys came to improve their English and to become acquainted with our universities. Throughout their stay they lived with Greenwood families.

Sensing new experiences all the time, Max had much to write home about.

To entertain at the Pigskin Prom, Victor sang several songs.

Coached by Leonard Scotten, Woodmen closed the 1968 grid season with a 7-2-1 record. Their hard fighting defense and their deceptive offense made them the team to beat in the county. It took the determined Decatur Central team to knock them from first place in the Mid-State Conference. Assistant coaches Gary Vandergriff and Harold Lawson aided with the winning season.

The team boasted several outstanding individuals. Among them were Bill Phelps, most valuable player and Tony Collins, most valuable lineman. Duke Woollen received the coveted Rick Machledt Memorial Award.

Deceiving mark

Coach Jack Nay's Woodmen had their ups and downs this season. When the team's offense was up, their defense was down. Despite several changes in the lineup the team continued to improve, and by sectional time the Woodmen were performing with a balanced attack. The team ended with a season record of 8 wins and 13 losses. This year's team is losing five seniors: John Bass, Larry Cooper, Bob Massingale, Don Burdsall, and Tom Hays. Helping with team duties were managers David Freshour and Paul Cox. The statisticians were John Adams, Bob Melton, and David Mattox.

On many occasions the team came from behind to thrill the fans and to prove their ability. Leading scorers were David Steele and Jerry Nichols. David Herrin and John Crump managed the team. The freshman basketball team coached by John Irons, suffered an unsuccessful season. They emerged victoriously only twice; against Edinburg and Shelbyville. The leading scorers and rebounders were Larry Garnett and Brian Dawson. Dennis McNulty was floor general for the hapless Woodmen. Managing were Mark Schier and Jim Frye.

Returning lettermen set stage For better season with boosted Spirit and a balanced squad

Although the record book cites the 1968 baseball season as one with five wins and ten losses, much can be inferred from what was not written. Such as the fact that the team was in a rebuilding situation.

Winning the first three games gave much optimism for a winning season for Coach Vandergriff's team with Indian Creek, Center Grove and Decatur Central, the first victims with scores of 5-0, 10-8 and 5-0 respectively. In the sectional Greenwood was outhit by Franklin 3-1, to knock the Woodmen out of the running.

Inexperience and injuries plagued the young players as full team strength was never realized. Only the hopes of returning lettermen gives a better outlook.

Gary Knotts runs in the county meet at Franklin High's course. Greenwood placed fourth in the meet.

PERSONALITIES create a world's pulse

Seniors—leaders of student organizations,

Fall, 1968 started the long awaited last year of high school education for one-hundred and sixty-five seniors.

From the dance floor to the stage did not take long as their first project was sponsoring the Pigskin Prom. The canvas on the gym floor was barely rolled up in time for the production of "Annie Get Your Gun" with Annie Koch and Jim McGuire in the leading roles.

1968-69 senior class officers deliberate post-high school education.

Led by Bruce Miller, president, and Melvin Smith, sponsor, the members of the senior class of '69 held most leadership positions.

Scholastic testing is over, scholarships awarded, athletic events played, and last lunches rushed. Commencement starts a new version of what high school left behind whether it is in community or civic organizations, in a college sorority house, or in some war torn zone. Wherever it is, the end becomes the beginning.

Homecoming queen, Margi Stewart, gets help from her escort, Duke Woollen, 1968 Bachelor of the Year.

Leadership

Leaving behind the whims of a sophomore, the Greenwood junior now sees his future in a more definite prospective. School life suddenly becomes a greater burden than once imagined. Ties to the school are developing as the class ring is received, denoting impending responsibilities. Among the responsibilities are concessions--money in the bank account, and prom--money out of the bank account, with David Steele, class president, the organizer. Sherwood Country Club was the site selected for the spring affair.

Peppy frosh typify Woodman competitive spirit

For freshmen the first year in high school was one filled with new experiences. The cooperative spirit effected a second consecutive victory in the float competition, to carry on their almost traditional lucky streak.

The Frosh were offered the opportunity to relieve class pressures and a chance to develop their athletic talents through school competition. By the end of the first year the freshmen had experienced the life of a Greenwood student.

Climb every mountain, or pyramid as the case may be, is the goal of the freshman gym class.

Loyalty determines success for eighth graders

A little bewildered at first, the new seventh grade quickly became accustomed to the rules and regulations demanded by the school. Boasting a record enrollment of students this year, the junior high made its presence known as they rushed through the over-crowded halls.

Both classes went into action as they competed in the homecoming float competition. The eighth graders were named third place winner with the theme, "Not All Sparkplugs are Champions."

"Axe the Sparkplugs" is Mitch Corrie's expression as he rides the eighth grade float.

If we were to say, "A penny saved is a penny earned," you might think we were quoting Benjamin Franklin. And you would be right. Nobody has put it any better than he has. The secret of saving money is to save it regularly. In this day and age of credit cards, don't be misled that saving is out of style.

Perseverance, performance and panic produce

Creation of the 1969 WOODMAN was accomplished through the perseverance, performance and panic of each staff member . . . perseverance to be steadfast in our purpose . . . performance to accomplish our goals . . . panic to meet our deadlines. The accomplishment was, we feel, a yearbook for the students . . . to capture their school life, to picture . . . A WOODMAN WORLD.

We wish to express our appreciation and to extend our gratitude to those who have aided us in our endeavor . . . to Mr. Ralph Marshall, faculty and staff for their willing cooperation . . . to Mr. Bill Wright as our yearbook representative from American Yearbook Company . . . to Mr. Byron Nash, Mr. Frank Hunt and the Reverend Charles Myers for their needed photography . . . and to Mr. Larry McCarty as our yearbook advisor who helped us to attain the perseverance, performance, and panic so necessary for the 1969 WOODMAN.

Caroline Randall

1969 Editor-in-chief

Margie Myers obtains advice from Mr. McCarty, as she types a copy block.

Staff members alphabetize the student cards after school to get the index ready for publication.

Editor-in-chief, Caroline Randall, leaves to mail some WOODMAN pages.

Helping to complete a deadline, Susan Myers, Associate editor, checks the student section for errors.
